Higher Education

GENERAL EDUCATION

The general path (Licei) aims at preparing students to higher-level studies and to the job world by providing them with appropriate competences and knowledge, as well as cultural and methodological instruments to develop their own critical and planning attitude.

Technical Education

Technical Institutes (Istituti Tecnici) have the general objective of providing students with a strong scientific and technological background in the economic and technological professional sectors.

Vocational Education

Vocational Institutes (Istituti Professionali) provide students with a strong technical and vocational general background in the sectors of services, industry, agriculture and handicraft, in order to make easier and faster access to the job market.

Both technical and vocational paths give access to university studies and to the Higher Technical Education and Training courses. On the contrary, at the end of the regional vocational and training path, students cannot go to University but they only can attend Higher Technical Education and Training courses, where they complete their education and training path.

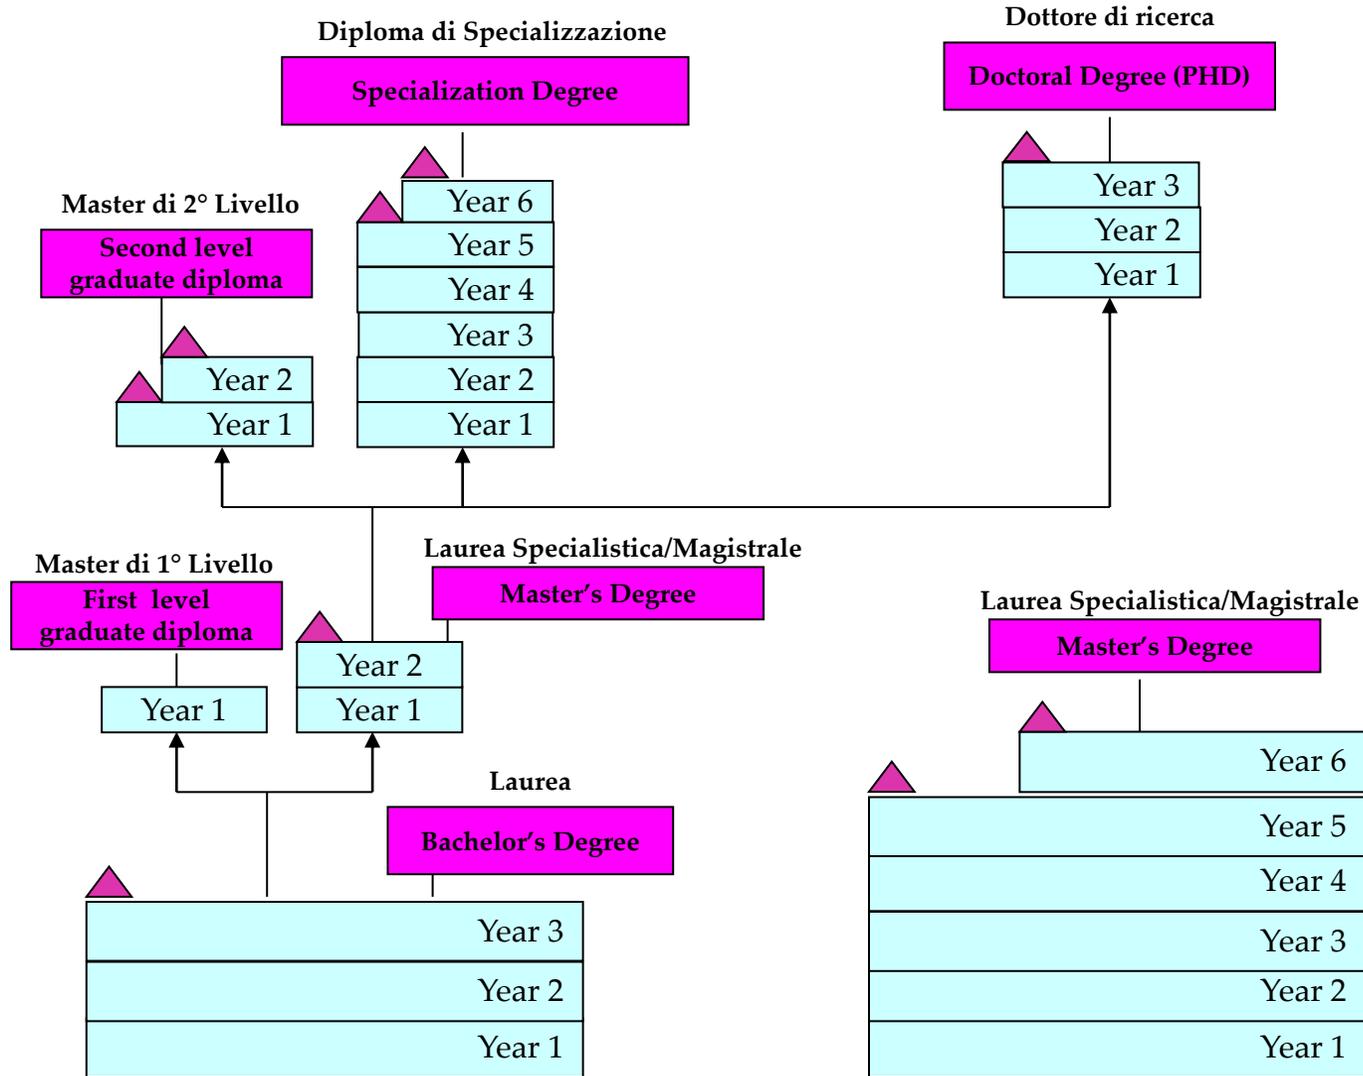

Higher Technical Education and Training

The post-secondary non-tertiary level offer courses within the Higher Technical Education and Training (IFTS = Istruzione e Formazione Tecnica Superiore) system that mainly aims at developing professional specializations to meet the needs of enterprises. These courses focus on the organization of services, of local bodies and public and private productive sectors undergoing deep technological innovations due to the globalization of markets. They are arranged at regional level according to specific economic planning.

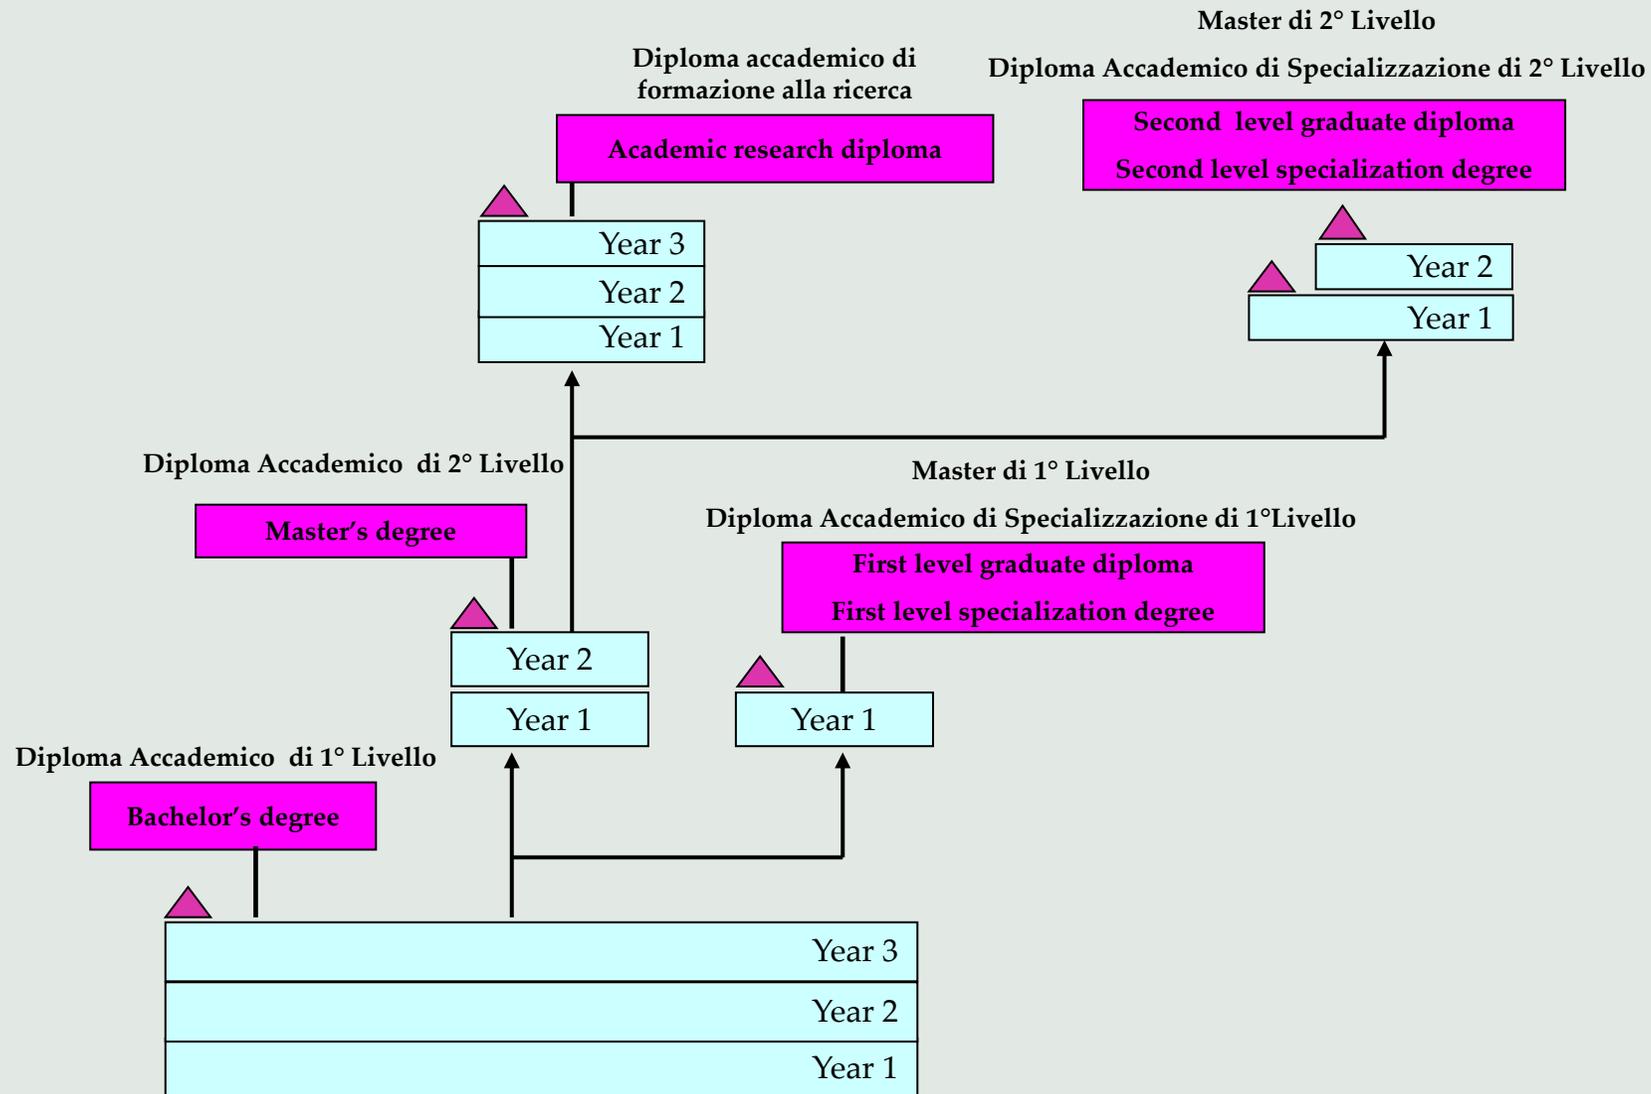

Higher Technical Institutes

Higher education is also offered by Higher Technical Institutes (ITS = Istituti Tecnici Superiori), highly specialized technical schools established to meet the demand of new and high skills coming from the technological sectors of enterprises. ITS courses offer short-cycle (four semesters) non-University higher education, that is a part of the education system.
